Waterpark Party

Janene slumped on her bed feeling very uncomfortable as her best friend, Tara, helped her pack.

Tara looked at her friend quizzically. “I don’t understand why you’re in such an awful mood. This party is going to be excellent!”

“Sure, I know it will be,” Janene said as she attempted a smile.

“I’m so pumped because I’ve never been to an indoor waterpark before,” Tara continued. “I had so much fun last summer at Summer Splash, I thought my legs would fall off from running from slide to slide and up the Giant Cyclone stairs so many times!”

“You know,” Tara suddenly recalled, “it was really peculiar that you were always sick when we invited you to come with us last year.”

“You know,” Janene interrupted, “all this packing might be for nothing because I think I might have a cold coming on.” She coughed unconvincingly.

Tara groaned. “What is your problem? This will be a great party. Where’s your swimsuit?”

“I don’t know,” sighed Janene.

“Maybe it’s packed away with my summer stuff in my closet.”

Tara went to the closet and pulled out a life jacket. “What’s this?” Janene’s face turned a bright shade of red at Tara’s unexpected discovery.

What’s Up, Jonah?

Jonah sat balancing on a basketball while he watched his friend Patrick tie his brand-new court shoes. Jonah wasn’t his usual talkative self, and Patrick couldn’t help but notice.

“What’s the matter?” Patrick asked. “Were you up late last weekend watching that movie I told you about?” Jonah didn’t answer. “You were so quiet today during English class, too,” continued Patrick. He stood up, and then he tossed Jonah his extra granola bar. “Here, maybe you’re hungry. You’ll need your energy if you want to beat me at one-on-one today.”

Jonah caught the granola bar and then began to study the wrapper intently.

“I have some comics I could loan you if you’re that desperate for reading material,” Patrick joked.

“I just like to see what I’m putting into my body,” Jonah said defensively. He put the granola bar down, “Thanks anyway, Patrick, but I can’t eat this granola bar. I really shouldn’t even be touching it.”

“Boy, this is new. Are you worried about germs? Since when are you such a health nut?” Patrick asked.

“Since yesterday,” replied Jonah. “I had a doctor’s visit, and it’s not the germs I’m worried about.”

Complete an Inference Map to help you draw conclusions or make generalizations about Jonah. Then answer the questions below.

1. How does Jonah generally act around his friends?

2. What things did Jonah do and say that were out of the ordinary?

3. What conclusions could be drawn from Jonah’s unusual behavior?

Proofreading for Spelling

Find the misspelled words and circle them. Write them correctly on the lines below.

Everyone has read a story about a great baseball team, fiery competitors who seeze every opportunity on the baseball feild. Defeat is foriegn to them, but they aren’t conceited in any way. My team wasn’t like that.

I won’t deceive you. We were the worst softball team in history. A review of our record takes no time at all. We lost 48 games. We won zero. We were successful at neither pitching nor hitting. Our uniforms were even beige! Nothing would relieve our losing streak. Once, the opposing pitcher pitched a no-hitter! As far as I know, no other team in the history of slow-pitch softball has failed to get a single hit.

Our efforts didn’t yeild a single playoff slot. We finally called it quits after four years. And I had just bought a new glove! I should have saved the receipt.

An action verb is a word that shows action. It says what someone or something does or did. Action verbs tell what event or activity is happening or has already happened.

Char eats pizza.

We played kickball at the park on Saturday.

Activity Underline the action verb in each sentence.

1. We walked from the auditorium to the baseball field.
2. I predict a win for the Cougars.
3. Gabe threw the opening pitch.
4. Keisha raced across the plate.
5. Rami pitched during the third inning.
6. We all cheer for the players.
7. Jack hits a home run.
8. Both teams played a great game.
Main and Helping Verbs

The main verb in a sentence tells what the subject does or is.

You are jumping too high.

A helping verb helps the main verb show an action or make a statement. Some common helping verbs are am, is, are, was, were, will, should, have, had, has, and can.

You are jumping too high.

Activity Underline the main verb in each sentence. Circle any helping verbs.

1. The team has played well this season.
2. We have won most of our games.
3. I will leave at the end of the season.
4. I can watch the game at my house.
5. I am writing a paper tonight.
6. You should concentrate on the game.
7. You could catch that ball.
8. He should watch the ball.

Thinking Question
Which verb tells what the subject is or does, and which verb helps it?
A linking verb links the subject of a sentence to a noun or adjective. A linking verb does not show action. It tells what someone or something is, was, or will be.

The coach looks happy today. (Happy describes coach.)

A being verb shows what the subject is or is like. A being verb is a kind of linking verb.

The coach is happy today.

Activity Underline the being verb or linking verb in each sentence.

1. Baseball is a very popular sport.
2. The captain looked quite happy.
3. The hit seemed fair to me.
4. The game became very tense.
5. You appeared calm at the end of the game.
6. Our seats seemed a long way from the field.
7. Baseball can be a very exciting game.
8. I felt good about the game.
9. She is so happy about the win.
10. The team was ecstatic about the playoffs.

Thinking Question
What word or words link the subject with another word that describes or renames it?

Establishing an Opinion

Good writers include strong topic sentences in their writing. In an opinion paragraph, the topic sentence will establish the writer’s opinion. The rest of the paragraph will use textual evidence and connections to the writer’s own life to support his or her opinion.

Weak topic sentence: It was a good article.

Strong topic sentence: The article was well-organized, easy to understand, funny, and possibly the best I have read on the subject.

Read the paragraphs. Rewrite the topic sentence to better state the writer’s opinion.

1. Most people think the desert is boring, but they are wrong. The wildflowers in the spring are a joy to see. Incredible sunsets light up the early evening sky. The subtle shades in the sand and stone are as soothing as a lullaby. The occasional quail or roadrunner that darts across the sandy roads brings life to the desert. It is a unique experience.

2. Greece is really interesting. Why? First, Greece is the birthplace of democracy and philosophy. You can visit the site in Athens where the first vote was cast. Second, the landscape is breathtaking. Beautiful beaches and mountainsides dotted with traditional homes can be found in most areas of the country. Finally, the people of Greece are some of the most hospitable people of Europe. They are friendly and are only too happy to tell you about Greece and its history.
